Everything we do is geared towards making the right purchase decision, or providing the right solution, in a straightforward language.

"I never knew you sold that!"

To see our complete product range, visit one of over 180 stores, log on to www.maplin.co.uk or call our order line 0844 557 6000, where you can order our main catalogue.

Hi there! My name's 'Chip', and I'm here to help...

You'll spot me throughout this leaflet, and others, giving my advice and sometimes trying to simplify some of the more complicated product ranges we sell by using simple language and little or no jargon. I'll tell you what some of the new technology terms mean and how simple some of our products are to use and that there's very little these days that need a degree in rocket science to understand.

Chip Explains!

Main types of 3D images...

Anaglyph images (red/blue/green glasses) - the earliest method of presenting theatrical 3-D, and the one most commonly associated with stereoscopy by the public at large, mostly because of non theatrical 3D media such as comic books and 3D TV broadcasts, where polarisation is not practical.

Polarisation (grey glasses) - to present a stereoscopic motion picture, two images are projected superimposed onto the same screen through different polarising filters. The viewer wears low-cost eyeglasses which also contain a pair of polarising filters at right angles to each other.

Silver Lenticular screen (real 3D screen) - both images are projected onto a high-gain, corrugated screen which reflects light at acute angles. In order to see the stereoscopic image, the viewer must sit within a very narrow angle that is nearly perpendicular to the screen, limiting the size of the audience.

Video Senders

What are they?

AV senders can distribute all your audio and video equipment signals anywhere in the home.

The AV sender transmits the signal from your DVD player, video, camcorder, digital Freeview box or satellite system to wherever you want to enjoy it; be that the bedroom, kitchen or even outside. There is no wiring required; the signals simply go through most walls, ceilings and doors. They even give you the ability to change channels from the other room via a remote control.

An audio video (AV) sender solves a problem that is becoming more and more common amongst home owners: having a DVD, satellite or cable TV in one room in your home and wanting to watch the programme elsewhere in the house; but without having to lay messy cables. For example:

- Your son / daughter wants to watch the Freeview programme on television in their bedroom
- You don't want to drill holes or leave trails of cables in the lounge
- You want to link a security video camera to a video recorder in another room
